

1998

Due Process, Supreme Court, Genesee County: Daniel S. v. Dowling

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.tourolaw.edu/lawreview>

Part of the Civil Law Commons, Constitutional Law Commons, Juvenile Law Commons, Legislation Commons, and the State and Local Government Law Commons

Recommended Citation

(1998) "Due Process, Supreme Court, Genesee County: Daniel S. v. Dowling," Touro Law Review: Vol. 14 : No. 3 , Article 25.

Available at: <https://digitalcommons.tourolaw.edu/lawreview/vol14/iss3/25>

This New York State Constitutional Decisions is brought to you for free and open access by Digital Commons @ Touro Law Center. It has been accepted for inclusion in Touro Law Review by an authorized editor of Digital Commons @ Touro Law Center. For more information, please contact lross@tourolaw.edu.

accept defendant's letter of authorization, permitting it to tow trucks from the Thruway, it also accepted the defendant's terms,²³⁷ including the defendant's right to revoke authorization without prior notice.²³⁸

The federal and state law both accord governmental agencies great discretion and authority in promulgating rules and procedures relating to government contracts or programs. In order to succeed on a due process claim, the plaintiff must demonstrate that he has a property interest.²³⁹ Such property interest is derived not from the Federal or State Constitutions, but from an independent source such as state law or other authority.²⁴⁰ However, when an agency retains significant discretion over participation in a government program, the plaintiff will be subject to the terms of the contract it signed with the government agency.²⁴¹

SUPREME COURT

GENESSEE COUNTY

Daniel S. v. Dowling²⁴²
(decided April 28, 1997)

In February 1994, petitioner Daniel S., a ten year old boy was allegedly abused by his father, who was separated from his mother.²⁴³ The Statewide Central Register of Child Abuse and Maltreatment [hereinafter "SCR"] was notified and an investigation was made according to the regulatory procedures.²⁴⁴ This action was filed on Daniel's behalf, pursuant to Article 78 of ²³⁷ Id. at 86, 652 N.Y.S.2d at 807.

²³⁸ Id. at 83, 652 N.Y.S.2d at 805.

²³⁹ Loyal Tire, at 82, 652 N.Y.S.2d at 806.

²⁴⁰ Loyal Tire, at 86, 652 N.Y.S.2d 804, 806-07.

²⁴¹ Id.

⁴¹⁰ 172 Misc. 2d 619, 660 N.Y.S.2d 288 (Sup. Ct. Genessee County 1997).

²⁴³ Id. at 620, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 290.

²⁴⁴ Id.

New York Civil Practice Law and Rules [hereinafter "CPLR"],²⁴⁵ contending that the regulatory provisions do not afford him due process, and that the review undertaken here also did not provide due process.²⁴⁶

After a hearing on these issues, the court held that the regulatory scheme does not contain provisions to allow a reported child victim to seek review of an investigative determination or to even be notified of such a finding.²⁴⁷ The regulations therefore failed to provide due process for a child victim to challenge an unfounded report.²⁴⁸ In addition, the minor was further deprived of due process where the challenge to the determination resulted in no change.²⁴⁹ The court concluded that Daniel was "not afforded due process to enforce his rights to be protected."²⁵⁰

Following the alleged abuse by his father, the local police and SCR were notified.²⁵¹ The local child protection service investigated the incident with a resultant determination of

²⁴⁵ Id. at 621, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 290. See N.Y. C.P.L.R. 7801 (McKinney 1994). Article 78 provides:

Except where otherwise provided by law, a proceeding under this article shall not be used to challenge a determination: 1. which is not final or can be adequately reviewed by appeal to a court or to some other body or officer or where the body or officer making the determination is expressly authorized by statute to rehear the matter upon the petitioner's application unless the determination to be reviewed was made upon a rehearing, or a rehearing has been denied, or the time within which the petitioner can procure a rehearing has elapsed

Id.

²⁴⁶ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 621, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 290. U.S. CONST. amend. V. This amendment states: "No person shall be . . . deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of law." Id. N.Y. CONST. art. I, § 6. This section provides, "No person shall be deprived of life, liberty, or property without due process of law." Id.

²⁴⁷ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 621, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 290.

⁴¹³ Id. at 630, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 295.

²⁴⁹ Id. at 621, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 290.

²⁵⁰ Id. at 630, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 295.

²⁵¹ Id. at 620, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 289.

“unfounded.”²⁵² The “[u]nfounded” determination meant that “the investigation did not find some credible evidence of the alleged abuse or maltreatment.”²⁵³ SCR was notified of the unfounded determination pursuant to regulations,²⁵⁴ and subsequently informed the father, the subject of this investigation, and the mother, the other named person in the report.²⁵⁵ No other person was notified and, eventually, records of the report and investigation were expunged.²⁵⁶ This was mandated by, and consistent with the statute and regulations.²⁵⁷ Consequently, the child’s mother filed a petition against the child’s father asserting that the father committed a “family offense against the child,” and a law guardian was appointed to represent the child.²⁵⁸ Upon learning that the investigation of the child abuse report yielded an “unfounded determination,” the guardian contacted the Buffalo regional office of the New York State Department of Social Services requesting an administrative review of this unfounded determination by the local district.²⁵⁹ The review rendered no change in the determination, and the instant proceeding was filed

²⁵² Id.

²⁵³ Id. N.Y. COMP. CODES R. & REGS. tit. 18, § 432.1(f) provides: “[u]nfounded report means any report made, unless an investigation determines that some credible evidence of the alleged abuse or maltreatment exists.” Id. (emphasis added).

²⁵⁴ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 620, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 289. N.Y. COMP. CODES R. & REGS. tit. 18, § 432.3(k) provides that the SCR should be notified if the determination is unfounded.

²⁵⁵ Daniel S., 172 Misc.2d at 620, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 289-90. N.Y. COMP. CODES R. & REGS. tit. 18, § 432.9(b) states that SCR will inform the subject(s) and other persons named in the report, except children under the age of 18 years, that the report was unfounded and he records of the report were sealed, or were expunged if the report had been received by the State Central Register of Child Abuse and Maltreatment prior to February 12, 1996.

Id.

²⁵⁶ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 620, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 290.

²⁵⁷ Id. at 621, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 290. See N.Y. COMP. CODES R. & REGS. tit. 18, § 432.9.

²⁵⁸ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 621, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 290.

²⁵⁹ Id.

on the child's behalf.²⁶⁰ Daniel sought declaration that the regulatory provisions violated his due process rights by not providing meaningful review.²⁶¹ Daniel sought relief from the determination "at least to the extent of a due process review."²⁶² The court rejected respondent's argument that the court was without authority to issue a declaratory judgment in an Article 78 proceeding.²⁶³ Therefore, the court was obligated to declare the rights of the parties.²⁶⁴

In the case of In re Edwin L.,²⁶⁵ the New York Court of Appeals applied a balancing test, as enunciated in Mathews v. Eldridge,²⁶⁶ to determine whether adequate due process protections were afforded in a particular situation by the state.²⁶⁷ The Mathews Court stated that "[d]ue process is flexible and calls for such procedural protections as the particular situation demands[.]" and "[a]ccordingly, resolution of the issue whether the administrative procedures provided here are constitutionally sufficient requires analysis of the governmental and private

²⁶⁰ Id.

²⁶¹ Id.

²⁶² Id.

²⁶³ Id.

²⁶⁴ Id. In Allen v. Coombe, 225 A.D. 2d 1084, 639 N.Y.S.2d 197 (4th Dep't 1996), Muslim inmates brought an Article 78 petition contending that they were improperly restricted from practicing their religion in a correctional facility. Id. at 1084, 639 N.Y.S.2d at 197. The petition was denied by the lower court, but the appellate court modified this order, stating that even though this proceeding was brought pursuant to Article 78, the lower court should have declared the parties' rights. Id. at 1084, 639 N.Y.S.2d at 197-98.

²⁶⁵ 88 N.Y.2d 593, 671 N.E.2d 1247, 648 N.Y.S.2d 850 (1996).

²⁶⁶ 424 U.S. 319, 334-35 (1976). In Mathews, petitioner was notified of the possibility of termination of disability benefits which were, in fact, later terminated. Id. at 323-24. The issue presented was "whether the Due Process Clause of the Fifth Amendment requires that prior to the termination of Social Security disability benefit payments the recipient be afforded an opportunity for an evidentiary hearing." Id. at 323. The Court held that the administrative procedures undertaken comported with Due Process and an evidentiary hearing was not required prior to termination of such benefits. Id. at 349.

²⁶⁷ In re Edwin, 88 N.Y.2d at 600, 671 N.E.2d at 1249-50, 648 N.Y.S.2d at 852-53; Mathews, 424 U.S. at 334-35.

interests that are affected.”²⁶⁸ The Court announced its balancing test by stating that

[P]rior decisions indicate that due process generally requires consideration of three distinct factors: First, the private interest that will be affected by the official action; second, the risk of an erroneous deprivation of such interest through the procedures used, and the probable value, if any, of additional or substitute procedural safeguards; and finally, the Government’s interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and administrative burdens that the additional or substitute procedural requirement would entail.²⁶⁹

In its analysis of the first prong of the Matthews test, the Daniel S. court found that the legislature recognized the private interest of adequately protecting children from abuse and neglect by their parents and other caretakers.²⁷⁰ In doing so, the SCR was created and a procedure for reporting and investigating suspected child abuse and neglect was in place.²⁷¹ The court concluded that the private interests of the child will be affected by the regulatory scheme.²⁷²

²⁶⁸ Id. at 334-35 (citing Morrisey V. Brewer, 408 U.S. 471, 481 (1972) (other citations omitted).

²⁶⁹ Id. at 334-35 (citations omitted).

²⁷⁰ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 622-23, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 291.

²⁷¹ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 623, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 291. The legislative purpose clause of the Social Services Law, Section 411 stated:

Abused and maltreated children in this state are in urgent need of an effective child protective service to prevent them from suffering further injury and impairment. It is the purpose of this title to encourage more complete reporting of suspected child abuse and maltreatment and to establish in each county of the state a child protective service capable of investigating such reports swiftly and competently and capable of providing protection for the child or children from further abuse or maltreatment and rehabilitative services for the child or children and the parents involved.

Id. (citation omitted).

²⁷² Id. at 622, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 291.

Analysis of the second prong of Matthews bears on whether the procedures challenged would create a risk of erroneous deprivation.²⁷³ The Daniel S. court examined the number of cases referred by the SCR which resulted in unfounded determinations.²⁷⁴ Six witnesses who worked in the system for many years at the local, regional or state level, testified that they were unfamiliar with a complaint about an unfounded report.²⁷⁵ In addition, the court examined the provisions of the statutory/regulatory scheme to understand whether their testimony constituted “bureaucratic hubris, or stonewalling . . . or . . . an institutionalized mindset.”²⁷⁶

Nothing in the statute provides for notice to a minor child victim, another person on the child’s behalf, or the original reporter, of an unfounded determination.²⁷⁷ The statute also does not provide for an objection or review of the unfounded determination on the child’s behalf.²⁷⁸ But, it does allow the alleged perpetrator to “challenge the ‘indicated’ determination and seek expungement of the records.”²⁷⁹ In contrast, the statutory scheme essentially treats the child as a non-entity, and in fact, respondent sought to dismiss the petition claiming the child lacked standing.²⁸⁰ Although apparently a case of first impression

²⁷³ Id. at 623, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 291.

²⁷⁴ Id. Evidence showed that 72.8% of all reports referred by the SCR resulted in unfounded determinations (approximately 94,000). Id. “In that year [1995], 128,896 cases of reported child abuse and neglect were referred for investigation. These cases involved 211,445 different children. In the first six years of this decade there have been over a half million unfounded investigations involving nearly one million children.” Id.

²⁷⁵ Id. at 623-24, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 291-92.

²⁷⁶ Id. at 624, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 292.

²⁷⁷ Id. at 624-25, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 292 (stating that only a mandated reporter who requested such notification is given notice). See generally N.Y. COMP. CODES R. & REGS tit. 18, § 432.12.

²⁷⁸ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 625, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 292.

²⁷⁹ Id. N.Y. SOC. SERV. LAW (McKinney 1997). Section 422(8) provides that within ninety days, the subject can request that the report be amended upon an unfounded determination, and if such amendment does not occur, the subject is entitled to a “fair hearing” scheduled by the department. Id.

⁴⁴⁵ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 624, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 292.

legally and administratively, the Daniel S. court concluded that with no safeguards, the procedures challenged herein create a risk of erroneous deprivation of the child's right to protection which can be "ameliorated by additional or substitute procedural safeguards."²⁸¹

In its analysis of the third prong of Mathews, to determine the procedural safeguards due, "the child's interest must be balanced against the governmental interest involved."²⁸² The interest identified by the government was cost, to the extent that it would be "prohibitively expensive" to grant review and hearing rights where there has been an unfounded determination.²⁸³ Testimony from the SCR's Program Manager attempted to show that cases in which abuse was indicated amounted to only a third of unfounded cases, and therefore giving review rights to child victims would cost three times the expense of the same review rights to the perpetrators.²⁸⁴ However, the court did not anticipate such a high challenge rate, and thus the evidence failed to establish that the governmental interest outweighs the abused child's private interest.²⁸⁵ Since the statutory/regulatory scheme contains no provisions for the child "to obtain review of an unfounded determination or even receive notification thereof, the law in this State does not provide due process for a reported child victim to challenge the unfounding of a child abuse or neglect report."²⁸⁶

Relying on Fuentes v. Shevin,²⁸⁷ the Daniel S. court established that the process due to child victims with unfounded reports, must ²⁸¹ Id. at 624-25, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 292.

²⁸² Id. at 625, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 292-93. See Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. at 335.

²⁸³ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 625, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 293.

²⁸⁴ Id. at 625-26, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 293.

²⁸⁵ Id. at 626, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 293.

²⁸⁶ Id.

²⁸⁷ 407 U.S. 67 (1972). In Fuentes, suit was brought challenging the constitutionality of Florida and Pennsylvania replevin provisions which allowed for seizure of personal property without a hearing or notice to the other party. Id. at 69-71. The Court found that such seizures amount to a deprivation of property. Id. at 85. "[D]ue process is afforded only by the kinds of 'notice' and 'hearing' that are aimed at establishing the validity or at include “prompt notice to the child and to the child’s parents or custodian or guardian if other than the parents.”²⁸⁸ Since the parent or someone close to the parent is often the perpetrator, notice must be given to “an independent third person designated by law to act in the child’s behalf, which representative would have the right to review the file which resulted in the unfounded determination.”²⁸⁹

The Daniel S. court, relying on Morrissey v. Brewer,²⁹⁰ also asserted that “due process further requires a review procedure should the child’s representative wish to request review[,]” with such procedure providing “the opportunity to be heard in person and to present evidence to a neutral hearing body or officer” in a timely manner.²⁹¹ Abused children should have the same rights as those given to their alleged perpetrators.²⁹² Daniel S. had an advocate available to file a complaint against the determination which led to a review by the Buffalo regional office; respondent contends that this review was sufficient for due process requirements.²⁹³ However, testimony revealed that the regional office had never received a similar complaint, and perhaps did not know how to deal with it since no departmental regulations existed.²⁹⁴ least the probable validity, of the underlying claim against the alleged debtor before he can be deprived of his property” Id. at 97 (citations omitted).

²⁸⁸ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 626, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 293.

²⁸⁹ Id. The court suggested the use of an ombudsman to meet this requirement. Id.

²⁹⁰ 408 U.S. 471 (1972).

²⁹¹ Daniel S., 172 Misc. 2d at 626, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 293 (citing Morrissey v. Brewer, 408 U.S. 471 (1972)). In Morrissey, petitioners contended that they were deprived of due process by having their paroles revoked without a hearing. Id. at 472-73. The Court concluded that the minimum due process requirements should include written notice of the violations, disclosure of the evidence used, an opportunity to be heard, to be allowed to present and cross-examine witnesses, and a “neutral and detached” hearing body. Id. at 488-89).

²⁹² Id.

²⁹³ Id. at 626-27, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 293.

²⁹⁴ Id. at 627, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 293-94.

The request was finally reviewed only after the Law Guardian made several phone calls, and subsequently requested information pursuant to the Freedom of Information Act.²⁹⁵ Although the Guardian expressed concern about “great potential for harm for the child[.]” no explanation was provided for the delay.²⁹⁶ Additionally, although the regional office was aware that the determination was questioned, it acted in strict accordance with the statute and ensured that the record was expunged.²⁹⁷ The Child Abuse Specialist did not verify any information or issues, did not discuss with the Law Guardian her reason for questioning the unfounded determination, and did not offer “an opportunity to be heard,” thereby making this a “paper review” only.²⁹⁸

Respondent’s final arguments suggested that the court should not take such precedential steps where the law has previously been changed to accommodate such events.²⁹⁹ However, this only reflects their misunderstanding of Elisa’s Law and the nature of this case.³⁰⁰ The “child protection laws do not provide as much protection for victims of child abuse and neglect as is provided for adult victims of intrafamilial domestic abuse”³⁰¹

While humanitarian considerations and public concern require the provision of a system to protect child abuse victims,³⁰² the current statutory scheme preemptorily denies child abuse victims the protections of the law.³⁰³ The evidence indicated that “the ²⁹⁵ Id. at 627, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 294.

²⁹⁶ Id.

²⁹⁷ Id.

²⁹⁸ Id. at 627-28, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 294.

²⁹⁹ Id. at 628, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 294.

³⁰⁰ Id. Although Elisa’s Law provides for some third party oversight where services are provided to children, it does not provide notification to the reported child victim of an unfounded determination, nor of a review procedure. Id. 1996 N.Y. Laws ch. 12, § 5959-A (1996) provides that Elisa’s Law is an Act “to amend the social services law, the domestic relations law, the family court act and the mental hygiene law, in relation to disclosure of information in the statewide central register of child abuse and maltreatment and disclosure of reports investigating the deaths of certain children.” Id.

³⁰¹ Id.

³⁰² Id. at 629, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 295.

³⁰³ Id. at 628-29, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 294-95.

State created a system where nearly three quarters of accepted reported cases are unfounded, thus resulting in no protective services.”³⁰⁴ Even though the number of children effected is almost one million, no provision for review exists on the victim’s behalf, nor has there ever been such a request for a review.³⁰⁵ Clearly, there was no system for regular monitoring, and even when undertaken, it was “infrequent and minuscule” with no “established procedures or protocol for assessing the validity of unfounded cases[.]”³⁰⁶ Due process is not afforded when large numbers of child abuse and neglect cases are accepted for investigation, determined to be unfounded, but no review process is provided by the State for the child victim.³⁰⁷

The United States Supreme Court has set forth as guidance three factors to be considered when addressing issues of due process.³⁰⁸ These are the private interest that would be affected by official action, the “risk of erroneous deprivation of such interest through the procedures used,” and any additional safeguards; and “the Government’s interest, including the function involved and the fiscal and administrative burdens that the additional” safeguards would entail.³⁰⁹ Relying on a due process analysis set forth by the United States Supreme Court, the Daniel S. court concluded that Daniel was not provided due process to exercise his right of protection from abuse.

The report of the New York State Commission on Child Abuse indicates that in 1995 55 percent of child abuse and neglect reports to the SCR were not registered (accepted) and that 72.8 percent of those accepted were unfounded. Therefore, only 12.5 percent of reported cases became eligible for protective services.

Id. at 628-29, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 295.

⁴⁶⁹ Id. at 628, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 294-95.

³⁰⁵ Id.

³⁰⁶ Id.

³⁰⁷ Id. at 629-30, 660 N.Y.S.2d at 295.

³⁰⁸ Matthews v. Eldridge, 424 U.S. 319, 334-35 (1976).

³⁰⁹ Id. at 335.